Capital society bent the knee and bowed low most yesterday and last evening as fete after fete in honor of the Crown Princess and Prince Bertil kept the round of official parading at top speed.

Luncheon at the Swedish Legation in honor of the royal visitors was followed by a huge reception which was scarcely finished before time for the banquet at the Mayflower Hotel. The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Wollmarstrom entertained at the first two functions, while members of the United States Delaware Valley Tercentenary Commission were hosts at the third.

The largest number of Washington residents had their chance to greet royalty and meet other members of the official Swedish delegation at the tercentenary celebration at the reception, which drew a sizable number from the Diplomatic Corps and residential and official circles.

The spacious rooms of the Swedish Legation were decorated for occasion with live bouquets and tall vases of blue hydrangeas, delphinium and blue roses. The blue and gold flag of Sweden waved over the entrance and made scores of Swedes wearing blue and gold badges mingled with each other and met Americans.

Up the thickly carpeted stairway went many guests, who were received in the second floor drawing room. There, Lieut. Col. Gunnar Ekeroth, aide-de-camp to H. R. H. the Crown Prince, was in attendance to Prince Bertil, and Count Nik. Fersen-Gyldenstolpe, chamberlain.

Prince Bertil In Informal Attire

Gowned in a four-length brown raspberry and navy blue shades, the Crown Princess also wore a broad-bordered raspberry straw hat with a single string of pearls, pearl earrings and long white gloves and an ermine-trimmed mantle. She was greeted more informally. His huge suit of glim and white cravats was trimmed with bow-tied buttons that matched his case.

Rejoicing with their guests of honor were the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Wollmarstrom, the latter wearing a long frock of oyster lace, fashioned with a redingote and trimmed in program ribbon of the same shade.

Standing not far away from the receiving line were Miss Betia Seaman, lady-in-waiting to the Crown Princess and Commander Bryan, naval aid and member of the royal suite.

From the drawing room guests wandered on through the library and into the hall, where a portrait of H. R. H. King Gustaf V. was the center of much favorable attention. A few feet away was the bread door to the dining room, where most of the Swedish delegation stayed during the reception.

The long tea table was loaded with sandwiches and Swedish cakes. Lemonade was three hot and iced tea. As a rule, the wine in one corner while wine was poured, and in the opposite corner punch and orange juice were served.

While frocks of street length predominated, a just number of new ones were turned up in foot-length gowns. Lady LeMay had on a small brown straw hat that Mrs. Robert Woods had worn in an earlier year. She was in fan gear that swept the floor. With it she wore a wide-brimmed straw hat and a string of beads to match. Countess van der Sirens Pontoux, wife of the minister, was dressed in a white gown that she had worn at the garden party on Her Majesty's birth. Her frock was topped with a large black straw hat.

Diplomatic Corps Well Represented

The French Ambassador, Count Rene Doyne de Saint-Quentin, was among the guests, along with the British Ambassador, Lord Leathley, and Mrs. Leathley, Robert Wood's daughter, and Mrs. Wood's sister, the German Ambassador, Frau Hans Dieckhoff, Mrs. Wood's daughter, and the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay.

Among the Americans were Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, who were accompanied by their four young girls. Also, the United States Ambassador, George T. Summerlin, the Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios and Senora de los Rios, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Otto Waldsted, Mrs. Wright, who is another Ambassador, and Senora de Casullo Najera, accompanied by their four young girls. Also, the Greek Legation, Nicholas Kostas, and the Counselor of the Greek Legation, Nicholas Kostas.

The Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Folke Wennerberg, was the main attraction at the reception, mingling with members of the Swedish delegation and introducing them to their guests. Mme. Wennerberg, wearing a prim crepe frock, looked after the tea table and saw that any number of guests had a chance to eat a Swedish "dram"—a small delicious cake—along with other refreshments. C. A. R. Wattlett, attaché of the Legation, likewise was much with the business of hosting.

The Czechoslovak Minister and Mme. Vladimir Kubis were, glimpsed in the company; also, Mrs. George Dakley Tolson, Representative and Mrs. Bloom, the Charge d'Affaires of Ireland; Robert Brennan and Mrs. Brennan, the Charge d'Affaires of the Yugoslav Legation, Dr. Albert Ribbar, the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Constantin Opanuckay, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Williams. Mr. Williams, who had quite a chat with Prince Bertil, recalled that he had an interview with the Prince's grandfather, King Gustaf, in Stockholm many years ago.

Stock Prices Rise 9 Billion In Two Weeks

Trading Runs Over 2 Million Shares Daily as Public Enters Market.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The Nation moved ahead on the road to recovery last week, as the market advanced in the highest and most significant manner. It is estimated $2,500,000,000 was added to market value of New York stock market, and another $9,000,000,000 was brought to more than $9,000,000,000 the paper value gain for the past 14 days.

With public participation in the market the greatest since the 1929 crash, the volume of trading in the past week swelled. More than 2,000,000 shares were turned over in New York for seven days and the total of 12,132,850 shares was the heaviest since the week ended October 23 last year, when prices crashed in frenzied trade.

In the preceding week's sharper uptick 10,112,140 shares were turned over. For the volume of 2,245,900 shares for the two weeks was equal to more than 2 1/2 per cent of the entire volume for the year. The rise was not "dipping as in the preceding week, but it held more significance. Wall street had looked for a sharp corrective reaction and many big pessimists had out to substantial short lines. But the public ignored the warnings of the market and rushed into the market when it got out of waiting for the setback. The result was a severe grinding for the professional shorts and handsome profits for the "initiators."

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

DON'T DROP IN CONN. July 3.—Despite the counter attraction of visiting royalty in Washington, a number of Capital residents are doing just what we are this week-end—sitting on their own or somebody else's sunny lawn, listening to the premature bursting fire-works in air and watching white sails on the water. Before alighting in this garden spot, however, we did a little sitting in less healthy but more glorious haunts in New York—beginning with the zebra-silk benches at El Morocco. The night before a big week-end exodus found practically no celebrities present, not even Jerome Zerbe, which is news. However, a large and gay party included Baroness Barbara Korff with two other former Washingtonians, Frank Currier, Simon and William Whitney and Reeve Lewis, who still lives here. Reeve and Barbara entrained later that night to visit on the Cape and mention the latter will go to Northeast Harbor in Maine for the summer. Barbara stilled painting in New York for several years and now has a job there. She told us the other night that Baroness

Serge Korff, her mother, has just taken a house on Fxhall road near the Duncan Phillips residence.

EL MOROCCO closed that night for the season, and after a few weeks rest the orchestra will open at Saratoga.

ON from that haunt of "cave societies to the Stock Club, where our impression that New York has gone rumba mad was strengthened. The little Cuban center of attention There was the usual quota of bustling models and debutantes who frequent the place, but with summer letting-down-of-hair, few were in evening clothes.

NEW YORK has its air cooling too, we discovered while sipping cocktails with a friend in the Ambassador Hotel Gardens (artificial) on Park avenue. In the crowd ten dancing there we spotted Richard Wylie, a former Washingtonian who now works in New York and has acquired an apartment there and a picturesque remodeled barn in Connecticut.

RUNNING quite a gamut from Park avenue to Hoboken, where his family, Ecce! ergo! the ship, by Europe, we caught a glimpse of the Netherlands Minister and his family. Escorting to the ship by Counselor Constant van Rieckens Limgard and Miss Virginia Bacon, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, they were embarking to spend the summer at their estate near Utrecht. Lily Meme van Heerma de Wit was fetching as ever in a black and white checked suit, a white jabot and perky white hat.

SO FAR, the only celebrity glimpsed in the neighborhood of Don't Drop In is Libby Holman, whom we saw playing just fair tennis this morning on her estate. Right on the waterfront is the large Italian villa, which she occupies with 11 servants and two guards for her son.

The neighborhood teems with famous names. Here reside Heywood Brown, Gene Tunney, Ursula Parrot, Quentin Reynolds and others of the "Connecticut Nutmeg" gang. The place is only an hour's ride from New York and has been taken over by artists and writers from Manhattan, Lily Pons (now honeymooning in South America) has a house in Silvermine and Gladys Swarthout is another singer to have discovered the charms of Connecticut.
